PERSONAL BACKGROUND

My high school is in the top 5 of Heilongjiang province , only 300 people were enrolled each year. Then I admit by Minzu university of China, which is not only a 211 but also a 985 college of China. I've learned a lot from my teachers and classmates at school. After graduation, I got a job as a sales man in an insurance company, I tried to convince people to make contract with our company everyday.

One year later, I jumped into a publishing house as a text editor, the mainly job I do was to fix the errors in the books and discuss with the writers about the books.

After all , I came to America for my master degree. Because I've got experiences from my work and my life, but I don't know how to turn these into skills or tools that can help me. During this period I found a part time job in a express company to make some money, which was not as much as my tuition fee but was enough to meet my daily expenses.

I am a good learner, I learn things from books, TV shows, films, and other people. I often rethink about the things I've been through, the people I met, the words I heard, and I find useful information during this process, which could make me become a better person.
