Autobiography

I am rich in teaching experiences. For the past 17 years, I have been teaching in schools and face various conditions in campus. My major was English in college. Teenagers are my main target students.

In the past, we followed the traditional teacher-oriented pedagogy, while now I eagerly set up a student-oriented learning environment to make my own flipped classroom.

In my spare time, I design worksheets to stimulate students' motivation for learning. They are told to be responsible for their learning. My students enjoy team work; they love to share their opinions, to seek the resolutions, and to taste the final outcome. They work together while I do evaluation every time after the class. This interaction pushes me to beat the brain for more inspiring contents for my worksheets.

I had been awarded the model teacher of San Chung City in 2000, when was my 6th year of teaching. For the past years, my working performance at school has always been evaluated on the top list without interruption.

I am proud of my relationship with students, whether they have graduated or are still at school. Open-mindedness, I think, is the key to maintain a well-running classroom. We mutually embrace each other to achieve a better learning outcome.

When I was a head of activity division in New Taipei High School, Taiwan, I had organized students to attend charity activities. We performed musical concert on the streets to raise funds for the disadvantaged and to promote non-smoking policy. Students enjoyed the passengers' admiration and the happiness to help the minor. I also arranged a charity visit to a nursery home to comfort the aged people. Some dropped tears on hearing touching songs we prepared. Students, who had took themselves lightly, were surprised to know how much they could do to the others. I was also responsible for exchange students in my school. They came from different countries to learn Chinese in Taiwan. I persuaded them to do voluntary works in libraries, to be assistants in the elementary school. To promote more interactions with them and the locals should be an efficient way to know each other better.

I like to make teaching videos. Those students who lag behind in my classes could take make-up lecturing through my online courses. These videos so far aiming at the basic English grammar, could be accessed by searching “秀萍陳” on YouTube.

Enclose the copies of my diplomas and certificates. I hope to have the pleasure of your granting me an interview.
